Ruth Grandin Symposium
for healthcare professionals, clergy and faith leaders

ANNENBERG CONFERENCE CENTER
FOR MEDICAL EDUCATION AT LANKENAU HOSPITAL

Main Line Health

The Ruth Grandin Faith, Health and the Human Experience Symposium at Lankenau Hospital is intended to provide a forum for healthcare workers, clergy and faith leaders to explore jointly the connections between faith and health in order to enhance healing of patients, family members, and the community.

Some of the most important interventions made by healthcare providers and clergy are ones which are neither reimbursed nor recompensed, and, at times, not even appreciated. This year's Ruth Grandin Symposium will explore our obligation as healthcare providers, as clergy, and as spiritual human beings to go the "extra mile" in making such interventions in the care of our patients and parishioners.

The essential question, stated via biblical reference, could be considered, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

About Ruth Grandin: A native of Ohio, Ruth made her home in the Philadelphia area, where her dear and faithful friends were her family. Throughout her life, Ruth experienced several health difficulties. Her faith enabled her to face each challenge with courage and dignity. In appreciation of her often anonymous gifts, which eased the lives of others, we honor her memory by exploring the relationship of healthcare and spirituality.
